1. The main task of the Communist Party of Chile (PCCh) in relation to international Communist policy is to develop propaganda in support of the theory of negotiation rather than force as a means of settling world conflicts. As interpreted by the PCCh, the new line calls for Party support of any movement toward reaching understanding among the world powers by conference and negotiation.
2. As an example of this policy, the Party is giving propaganda support to Churchill's call for a meeting of the major powers.

25X1A Comment. This new turn to peace propaganda following the Korean armistice is probably designed as a prelude for propaganda to accompany peace settlement negotiations.
